Macro Commentary

After a volatile April marked by policy shifts and market swings, May opened on a steadier note. Australia was largely insulated from global trade tensions, as President Trump turned attention to trade talks with China and Europe.

The Australian share market gained ground, with the ASX 200 rising 4.23% amid improving investor sentiment. Though early volatility and global trade headlines weighed on sentiment, strong sectoral performances, particularly in Information Technology (up 19.80%) and Energy (up 8.62%), supported the market. Consumer Staples delivered a more modest 1.20% gain.

Political uncertainty eased after Labor's decisive May 3 election victory, securing a majority despite forecasts of a minority government. A key post-election policy is a proposed 15% tax on superannuation earnings above $3 million, set to begin July 1. Concerns include its non-indexed threshold and the potential taxation of unrealised gains, which could create liquidity issues for affected individuals.

May's economic data was mixed. Unemployment held steady at 4.1%, while underemployment edged up to 6.0%. Retail sales slipped 0.1% in April, missing forecasts and ending a three-month streak of gains. Given that retail accounts for 35% of household consumption, this suggests a soft start to the second quarter.

On May 20, the RBA cut the cash rate by 25 basis points to 3.85%, responding to slowing growth and easing inflation. Although some had expected a deeper cut, the RBA opted for caution in case of future volatility. Markets now anticipate three cuts in total for 2025, which aligns with our base case.

In the U.S., the S&P 500 rose 6.15% in May in USD terms, its strongest May performance since 1990, despite continued concerns over inflation, trade policy, and broader economic conditions. The Federal Reserve held rates steady on May 8, maintaining a cautious stance.

Trade tensions between the U.S. and China eased as both sides rolled back April's sharp tariff hikes. U.S. tariffs were reduced from 145% to 30%, and China lowered its tariffs from 125% to 10%. These reductions are temporary, intended to allow for 90 days of further negotiation. Meanwhile, Trump briefly escalated tensions with the European Union, threatening new 50% tariffs from June 1. After a call with the European Commission president, these were postponed to July 9 to allow time for further talks.

Late in May, the U.S. Court of International Trade ruled that Trump had exceeded his authority by imposing tariffs under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act. The White House appealed, pausing the ruling, and the case is likely to reach the Supreme Court.

Another significant development was the House passing Trump's "One Big Beautiful Bill", which includes tax cuts, border security funding, and reforms to social programs. It is projected to add USD $3.8 trillion to the national debt over the next decade and will likely be amended in the Senate.

Amid global uncertainty, gold remained a safe haven. After reaching an all-time high above USD $3,500 per ounce in April, it dipped to around USD $3,289 by the end of May, reflecting shifts in trade sentiment.

Looking ahead, U.S. trade policy remains a major source of uncertainty. In this environment, we remain focused on building diversified, long-term portfolios supported by strong market fundamentals.

Holdings Commentary

Following strong market performance in late April, equities continued to rally in May, delivering another solid month.

Within Australian equities, Technology One (TNE) was a standout performer. The Brisbane-based SaaS provider released its 1H FY25 results on May 20th, reporting a 19% increase in revenue and a 31% rise in earnings for the half. Management also upgraded their full-year earnings guidance to 13%–17%, up from the 12%–16% range provided at the FY24 results. In response to the upgraded outlook, TNE's share price surged 36.59% over the month. TNE has been a long-standing conviction holding within the Resonant Managed Accounts. The company delivers cloud-based software solutions to governments and businesses, helping clients replace legacy in-house systems - which often require dedicated engineering support - with scalable and efficient platforms hosted by TNE.

In international equities, the Vanguard Global Value Equity Active ETF (VVLU) rose 6.05% in May, recovering most of the ~5.34% loss experienced during April's volatility. The fund uses a rules-based factor model to invest in securities trading at lower prices relative to their fundamental value. Many manufacturing and financial stocks that score well on this model were sold off in April; however, most have since rebounded, contributing to the fund's strong performance in May.
